Single-Semester Course

Ferenczi and Modern Psychoanalysis: Contrasts and Convergences

This course examines Ferenczi's evolution in theory and technique, including his independent views on nachträglichkeit, mutual analysis, and seduction theory. We will study his thinking on the role of the psychoanalyst, which anticipates modern psychoanalytic understandings of transference, countertransference, and resistance. The continuities and differences between the theories and clinical approaches of Sandor Ferenczi and Hyman Spotnitz are discussed in the context of current modern psychoanalytic thought.
